6. Specialization and Research Interests: My principal research interests concentrate on the impact of globalization in its varied dimensions on the Realist paradigm in general and specifically on the state, sovereignty and security. My M.Phil. dissertation titled, 'The Relevance of the Realist paradigm in the age of Globalization' investigated whether the state and power/security centric realist approach to the study of International Relations is relevant under the aegis of Globalization and to empirically analyze whether the conventional realist understanding of these concepts have underwent any fundamental changes owing to the globalizing forces ; whether globalization has altered the national security understanding of the major stable and unstable states in the world. My general research interests broadly center upon International Relations Theory, Indian foreign policy, Western Political thought and South Asian politics.
